

Being artifact-free costs fixed stepping every step, and error control only the impacts

(a) Hard clutter: the learner's coarse setting (hatched, artifacts) vs the cheapest artifact-free setting of each arm (solid) — the matched-accuracy cost

(b) Where the cost goes: fixed step pays the same every step; error control pays during the impacts and coasts at $\delta t_{\max}$ once the pile settles

